Steilacoom

In 1975, the Steilacoom historic district was nominated for the National Register of Historic Places. Steilacoom is an amazing place, modern and yet locked into its roots. Steilacoom has retained a strong sense of history and pride, and is a place of many firsts:

- The first incorporated community in Washington Territory
- The first brick building north of the Columbia River (which was also the first jail in Pierce County)
- The first Protestant church building
- The first school in Pierce County
- The first official U.S. presence in Washington Territory (Fort Steilacoom, now located within the boundaries of Lakewood)
- The first public lending library in Washington Territory
