Bothell was incorporated in 1909 as a frontier logging town filled with the spirit of innovation. As the region was populated, Bothell was a primary agricultural area in the production of dairy products. During the 1980-1990's, growth pushed farms north, as corporate campuses with millions of square feet in commercial office and manufacturing space replaced them. Bothell is now widely known as a place of opportunity and the sweet spot in the HighTech/ BioTech Corridor that spans from Redmond to Lynnwood.

Today, with its large and innovative knowledge-work force, its new and expanding world-class university campus, and status as a hub for three public transit agencies, Bothell has become a strategic setting to accommodate the region's explosive growth.
